Travelling for Seniors - By Rob Clement

I do not say Senior citizens as that term in the UK is reserved for those who are eligible to receive a state pension. Some of you may be in the same age bracket as I am – in my 50's.

What about Travel? Are there places you have been to and want to see again? Are there places that your spouse has been to that they really want to take you to visit? Now is the time to travel and see the world!

Maybe you say I am too old? Perhaps you are now in the over-60 group and you feel your travelling days are over. Think again. My wife's grandmother flew for the first from the UK to Canada and she was 80.

Many of the over-60's in the UK take the advantage of flying from the UK with its cold damp winters to the sun of Spain and Portugal for three months. They benefit from lower fuel bills and less problems with arthritic joints during the cold damp weather. So travel for the benefit of your health.

Maybe you say it is too expensive? Yes it is if you have to travel at the peak times of the year when the children are off school. BUT you will either have children who have left home or will very soon leave home. So what is stopping you having a great vacation in May or in September?

Maybe you say that you can never afford it? Have you ever taken the trouble to get a brochure from a Travel Agent or looked at the web for the information? If you do not have the time, then get your children or grandchildren to get something. The little children often think that it's great to help out grandma and grandpa looking for anything on the web.

Don't forget to take plenty of photographs when you travel. Descriptions can hardly convey the grandeur of the Alps or the foothills of the Himalayas. These days, if you use 35 mm film, the photos can be put onto CD as part of the processing. You can then make copies easily and you can use a computer projector to show them to all the family at once.

If you have taken the plunge and are already using a digital camera then you can download all the photos to a CD and share them with the family.

Remember your travel insurance to help in times of emergency. Accidents and incidents do happen even in the best organised holidays. I can still remember being held up for 8 hours in China waiting for a plane. By the way the excuse was that they had lost the plane. I know that China is a big country but has anyone heard of a lost plane in the USA?

Take the opportunity to take a look at our articles that we have found that are relevant to you seniors. Then peruse some of the articles on specific destinations. It will be well worth your while.
